WAR SUMMARY OF THE LATEST EVENTS

The Austrian offensive in the Trentino is upon a large scale, and is producing results unexpectedly important. Vienna reports that since the drive down the valley of the Adige began 141 officers and 6,200 Italian soldiers have been captured. In planning this advance the Austrians have evidently made full use of the railway and the roadway which occupy the valley of the Adige. By way of Trent, Rovereto and Mori the conquerors from the north have usually descended into the Italian plain, striking at Verona, which lies but twenty miles south of the mountain range that marks the present frontier. (Checked by the strength of the defences of Rovereto) the Italians early in the campaign gave up the idea of a direct advance up the Adige valley toward Trent, and have been seeking by enveloping movements, directed from both east and west, to force the Austrians to withdraw from Riva, Rovereto and other strong positions in the Southern Trentino.

A few days ago it seemed that the Italians were about to succeed in this plan, for the announcement was made that the inhabitants of the Adige Valley were leaving their village under the compulsion of Austrian troops. This step was believed to indicate evacuation by the enemy of his southerly positions and concentration nearer Trent. It is now seen that the driving of these Italian subjects of Austria from their homes was a precautionary measure to prevent the Italians from learning the details of the Austrian plans for a forward movement. It was known that 300,000 Austrians had been concentrated in the Tyrol, but it could hardly have been known that most of them were in the valleys and hills in the region between Trent and Rovereto. The Austrians must have struck in over-ed at an end so often, only to be resumed later, that it would not be safe to dismiss it altogether from the place it has occupied in the public mind till Germany begins to remove her siege howitzers to some other sphere of action. As matters stand, however, the French are warranted in declaring that Verdun is the greatest German defeat since the war began.

Aerial combats in the Verdun region yesterday numbered no less than 33. Three German machines were brought down and not a single French one. Elsewhere two other German aeroplanes were destroyed. The French aviators bombed many points behind the aviator's lines. In the House of Commons Mr. Tennant strongly denied reports that Germany had established aerial supremacy as against aviators. There were better machines than the Fokker coming into action on the British side. Non-military aviation experts do not think much of the British biplanes for swift aggressive aerial warfare. The French monoplanes are more difficult to handle because of their lack of stability, but the records show that they produce results.

A report covering a fortnight's operations on the Saloniki front states that since the first of May there has been no important change. No serious infantry engagements have been fought. The artillery on both sides have been busy. The Allies have occupied Dova Tepe, while other forces are reported as having "Advanced toward Monastir." The Allies may not make their main advance when the time for an advance comes, by the Valley of the Vardar, where the enemy has mounted many guns. They have the choice of almost a hundred miles of frontier between Monastir and Kavaia, with fairly good railway accommodation all the way parallel to the border.

It is officially announced that a British monitor, the M-30, has been sunk by the fire of Turkish batteries in the Mediterranean. Two men were killed and two wounded in the engagement, which took place on the night of May 13. When the British battleships were withdrawn from the Gallipoli operations because of the danger from submarine attack, monitors were substituted. They have been used freely in the Eastern Mediterranean ever since. Neither there nor on the Belgian coast has any monitor been destroyed by the explosion of a torpedo, which proves conclusively that they are reasonably submarine-proof. But they are not immune to the fire of heavy guns, as Saturday's engagement proves.

The British official report tells of bombing operations by Seaforth Highlanders near Roclincourt, which were most successful. There has been much artillery activity and many aerial engagements have taken place. On Tuesday 27 aerial duels occurred, during which three German and two British machines were put out of action.

There is little official news from the caucuses save the statement that in the direction of Diarbekr a Turkish in the Tyrol, but it could hardly have been known that most of them were in the valleys and hills in the region between Trent and Rovereto. The Austrians must have struck in overwhelming force to sweep up 6,350 prisoners in a region so difficult as that in which the drive took place, where isolated positions on mountain tops and in passes at high altitudes are held by small groups of men because of the impossibility of providing supplies and munitions or larger numbers. The Austrian plans probably do not contemplate a descent to the Italian plain. The chief object was doubtless to break the Italian stranglehold on the lower Trentino. If that was the purpose it has been fairly well accomplished.

The Italian report admits that "in the zone between the Terragnola Valley and the Upper Astico a violent concentration of artillery fire of all calibres induced us Wednesday to affect another rectification of our front and to abandon some advanced positions." This admission is accompanied by the cheering news that in the Lagarina Valley the Austrians failed utterly in their attacks, and suffered "enormous losses," numerous bodies being swept away by the Adige River current. In the Asiago sector also the Austrians lost heavily and made no progress. Finally in the Sugana Valley the enemy's rush was stopped by counter-attacks, which left 380 Austrian prisoners in the hands of the Italians. Three hundred from sixty-three hundred and fifty still leaves the enemy a long lead.

There was great artillery activity in the Verdun region yesterday on both sides of the Meuse but no infantry engagements. The French military writers have finally dismissed the possibility of a German victory there, and declare that the net results of the three months' struggle has been the loss of 300,000 Germans, killed or wounded, who cannot be replaced. The Verdun struggle has been declared.

The Beverley McDonald Co., of Picton, have purchased the Sproule store. See advt.

Tuesday 27 aerial duels occurred, during which three German and two British machines were put out of action.

There is little official news from the caucuses save the statement that in the direction of Diarbekr a Turkish attack was repulsed. An unofficial report places the number of Turks captured during the past three weeks by the Grand Duke Nicholas' armies at 37,000 men. The pressure on the British army of the Tigris has been greatly lessened by the withdrawal of 20,000 Turks from Kut-el-Amara to face the Russians advancing on Bagdad. Sir Percy Lake will seek to advance the moment the Tigris floods subside sufficiently to enable him to do so.

STRAWBERRY PLANTS

This year we introduce our new late berry,
Thompsons, No. 135, which we secured by crossing Buster and Pocumoke. It has the color, firmness, and quality of Pocumoke, with the hardiness and drought resisting qualities of Buster, and a better plant maker than either.
Well suited to sections subject to late frosts.
The other varieties we grow are, Buster, Crescent, Corsican, Gill, Hustler, Island King, Hilda, Gibson, Mohawk, Myrtle, Pocumoke,
Ridgeway, Senator, Dunlap, Parson's Beauty
Venus, Thompson's No. 24, No. 38 and 67.
We believe all varieties are true to name.

MOVING ON BAGDAD.

Russian Army Has Taken Rowanduz in Mesopotamia.

PETROGRAD, May 16.—A Russian army has entered Mesopotamia from the north, and has taken Rowanduz, 82 miles north-east of Mosul. Announcement of the taking of the town made last night was the first official intimation that there are two Russian armies engaged in the Mesopotamian operations. The other army recently took Kasr-i-Shirin, on the Persian side of the Persian-Mesopotamian frontier, and is supposed to be preparing to advance down the Dila valley against Bagdad. Mosul is on the Tigris, 200 miles north of Bagdad.

Meeting Stubborn Resistance.

PETROGRAD, May 16.—The Russian forces near Erzingan, an important military centre 100 miles west of Erzerum, in a battle with the Turks captured 30 officers and 365 men. The Russian left wing also gained a victory over the Turks and captured prisoners and loot, including 2,000 rifles. On the following day the Turks, having concentrated in considerable forces, assumed the offensive, and after an all-day fight compelled the Russian advance guards to retire in some places.

In the direction of Mosul the Russian troops in Mesopotamia have occupied the Rowanduz region, where they defeated enemy detachments and captured three guns.

Saturday night's official communiqué concerning these operations says: "In the direction of Erzingan detachments of our regular troops in conjunction with territorial reserves, following a merciless night attack powerfully organized by the enemy on a lofty range dominating the whole adjoining region, took prisoner in the course of the engagement 30 officers and 365 soldiers of Turkish infantry."

"The troops forming the advance guard of our army easily checked an enemy offensive movement in the region of Mamakhatun."

"On the left wing of our army one of our columns having defeated the Turks in an engagement which lasted two days, made prisoners and captured an undamaged gun, over 2,000 rifles, many thousand cartridges, and a large quantity of gunpowder and other material."

CASEMENT TRIAL OPENS

Traitor Irish Knight Appears in Bow Street Court.

Along With Renegade Soldier Named Bailey He is Undergoing a Preliminary Examination on Charge of High Treason—Evidence of Crown is Mostly Aimed at Casement—Conspiracy in America.

LONDON, May 16.—The writing of a new chapter of the history of the Sinn Féin rebellion was begun Monday when Sir Roger Casement, knighted in 1911 for services to the British Government and famous for his aid in exposing the Putumayo (Congo) rubber atrocities, and Daniel Julian Bailey, an Irish private soldier, one of his companions on the ill-fated submarine trip from Germany to Ireland, were placed in the dock of the Bow Street Police Court for preliminary examination on the charge of high treason.

While considerable testimony introduced by the Crown tended to incriminate Bailey, the main attack of the prosecution was directed against Casement in an endeavor to enmesh him in a net of evidence which would establish without question the leading part it is claimed he played in the conspiracy whose ramifications extended even to America.

Three of England's leading judges will try Casement, including Lord Chief Justice Baron Reading. E. F. Smith, Attorney-General, will lead the counsel for the Crown. George Cavan Duffy will be the solicitor in charge of the prisoner's case, and Artemus Jones is expected to act as counsel.

Ever since Sir Roger was arrested, a few days before the revolutionary outbreak in Ireland, while attempting to land arms and ammunition on the Irish coast, which were to aid the rebels, the interest of the British people has been eagerly concentrated upon the cell in the Tower of London where Casement is awaiting trial. The prisoner has prepared a "patriotic address," but it is doubted whether he will be allowed to deliver it.

According to Reynolds' Weekly Sir Roger Casement received three friends in the London Tower Saturday and discussed his case with them.

SECONDHAND GLASS.

Interesting Methods of a Business That is Quite Extensive.

The salvage glass industry is of such importance and extent that many dealers in secondhand glass specialize in one branch or another. Some, for instance, handle only plate glass that comes to them by reason of the demolition of old buildings, razed to make place for new structures. Salvage glass of this sort brings prices not far below those of new glass.

A considerable quantity of the salvage glass dealer's stock emanates from the plate glass insurance companies. The methods of these companies in taking over glass vary. One concern may keep no stock on hand, simply buying whatever is required to replace a broken pane, disposing of the broken glass, if enough remains to be sold, to the salvage dealer. Sometimes a company will have a warehouse of its own, to which it will remove broken glass that may still be in condition to use. Frequently it will happen that only one corner has been broken from a large pane and that this may be cut down to fit a smaller window.

Most plate glass is insured, but there is much that is not. In the case of an uninsured plate that is broken the owner must, of course, go to a dealer for a new plate. He will sell the broken plate to the salvage dealer. It follows therefore that from insurance companies, from building wreckers and from owners of uninsured glass the salvage glass dealers accumulate great quantities of secondhand plate glass. Much of this is in such a condition that it may be reset anywhere. Should the injury consist, for instance, of simply a deep scratch in the center it is easy to make that plate salable. The secondhand dealer cuts out a strip containing the scratch and thus have left two smaller plates, quite suitable for smaller windows.

When injured plate glass is too much scratched to be available for windows it is sometimes made into ground or frosted glass for office partitions or doors. Salvage plate glass too small for use in windows is employed for the glass doors of refrigerators, and larger pieces are utilized in the making of glass table tops. Small fragments go to the making of hand mirrors, although only clear pieces may be so employed. Other pieces, too small for LONDON, May 16.—The Germans- continue to feel out the British- lines, seeking a point for a general- onslaught.

On Friday night, after a heavy- bombardment, the Germans made- three attacks against the British- trenches between the River Somme- and Maricourt, one of which suc- ceeded in getting into the British- trenches, but was at once driven out. MARTIAL LAW RELAXED.

Premier Asquith Relieves Dublin of- Hard Restrictions.

DUBLIN, May 16.—The great- modification in the regulations of- martial law gave the people of Dub- lin Sunday a freedom of movement- strongly contrasting with the restric- tions imposed since the rebellion. All may now come and go as they- wish between the hours of four in- the morning and midnight. During- the remaining four hours they must- keep within doors.

It is generally understood that- Premier Asquith is responsible for- this relaxation. The Premier's study- of conditions and the sentiments of- the people apparently convinced him- that there was no great element of- rebellious spirit remaining.

Mr. Asquith's chief occupation- since his arrival in Dublin has con- sisted in seeking a method for the- adjustment of the Irish crisis and in- ascertaining whether it would be ad- visable to return to the former sys- tem of government or adopt a change- of rule more in accordance with the- wishes of the people. The Premier- has also given some attention to- to minor factors, these having to do- with the disposal of the remaining- rebel prisoners and compensation for- the material damage done in- Dublin.

House Will Probably Pass Report of- Committee Unanimously.

OTTAWA, May 16.—Legislation- will, it is understood, be introduced- to-morrow to give effect to the re- port of the Committee on Pensions. It- will probably pass unanimously.

The committee's recommendation, it- will be remembered, included a- schedule of pensions on an appreci- ably higher scale than that hitherto- prevailing. There are also a number- of provisions as to the classes into- which different degrees of disability, warranting pensioning, are divided. As a result of the passage of this- legislation, the Canadian private sol- dier will be placed in an exception- ally favorable position as compared- with the amounts of pensions paid by- the other dominions, Great Britain- and the other warring nations.

Men Who Fear Opportunity.

In the American Magazine Hugh S. Fullerton says:

"Thousands of us who are making- fairly comfortable livings for families- pass plain turning points, refusing to- turn or to attack the opening, through- sheer timidity. There is no class so- timid as the man with a family, who- refuses to change because he fears he- will risk the small sum he has accumu- lated to educate the children and pro- vide for the family in case of his- death. Ninety-nine out of a hundred- men in this class keep straight ahead- when they see a turning point clearly."

Just here the facts do not run exactly, with Colonel Carnegie's reasons. The animating motive so Colonel Carnegie states in his crisp Aberdeen English, in handing over these contracts to the Yankee companies was "airgency"—that is to say the British Government wanted the fuses in a hell of a hurry. The "airgency" did not work out quite as Colonel Carnegie expected. It was six months before either of the companies delivered a single fuse and up to a month ago only five per cent. of the contract had been forwarded to the British authorities. Meanwhile Ypres and several

Time, however, seems to have modified Colonel Carnegie's estimate of Canadian ability to manufacture fuses, especially as the American companies fell down in that little matter of "dirigency." At all events Messrs. Russell and Harris were appeased with a promise that they would get an order if the British Government had any more orders to give, and subsequently this promise was fulfilled. As Colonel Carnegie puts it, the Shell Committee did not wait for the British Government to move, but gave an order "off its own bat" to Messrs. Russell and Harris for five hundred thousand fuses. This order was given from a "reservoir" of a million and a half which the Committee had up its sleeve. A "reservoir" is a handy thing to have around when public opinion presses.

standing" which did worse than the Allison companies in the matter of fuse deliveries when Mr. Nesbit arose and made his usual objection. "I protest!" he said, with one eye on the court and the other on the news- paper men. "I protest as a citizen of Canada that nothing can be more harmful to the morale of the country than what is going on in this room!"

Now, Mr. Justice Duff had heard this sort of thing a dozen times before and was getting tired of Mr. Nesbit's pose, so he gave that eminent K.C. one under the fifth rib, just where it was coming to him.

"I too," said Judge Duff with a smile like a sword, "am a citizen of Canada. I thought you were here as counsel for somebody." Whereupon they all laughed, except Nesbit, K.C., who blushed violently. This will probably hold Sir Sam's right hand pro- tector for awhile. Or as Mr. Justice Duff puts it, he will probably treat the suggestion of the court with more respect hereafter.

Hedged about as his truth-telling propensities are by the limits of the inquiry, and the vigilance of lawyers, Colonel Carnegie has managed to state a number of interesting facts.

a single fuse and up to a month ago only five per cent. of the contract had been forwarded to the British authori- ties. Meanwhile Ypres and several other famous battles had to be fought without the fuses. Colonel Carnegie and the Shell Committee had arranged for, in short there was months and months difference between Col- onel Carnegie's idea of "airgency" and the Allison crowd's performance. Time extensions were given, but the "air- gency" of the Allison outfit continued sluggish, so much so that, since the Kyte charges were made, the orders have been to some extent revised and the prices pruned for the delinquent companies.

Another reason that impelled Col- onel Carnegie to recommend the Al- lison companies was that they had four leading "expairts" whereas Rus- sell and Harris had only one. This reason reflects to some extent on the Colonel's arithmetic. Patriotism, loy- alty—the colonel is strong on these—and actual plant being considered it is hard to see why a Canadian com- pany of standing, with buildings and equipment and one "expairt" was not entitled to at least one-fifth of the five million fuse order even if two Yankee companies without plant of

The Marquis of Granby bears a title that swings from many a tavern sign- board all England over. London alone has some half a dozen. Yet this popu- lar soldier, who commanded England's troops in Germany during the Seven Years' war, was the target of some of "Junius'" most bitter invective. The secret of his popularity lay in the fact that Granby was always a soldier's general who not only led them well in the fight, but also cared for their com- fort in the camp. The first inn to bear the marquis' head as a sign is said to have been opened by one of his own guardsmen at Hounslow. Apart from Wellington and Nelson, the marquis comes easily first among England's tavern heroes.—London Chronicle.

The Spanish Moors.

When the people of the rest of Eu- rope were little better than barbarians the Spanish Moors were in the midst of a splendid culture. As early as the tenth century this country was the source of learning for all Europe. Their libraries, schools, arts, sciences, luxurious refinements and all round material and intellectual advancement differentiated them from the rest of Europe as clearly as ancient Greece was from the peoples that surround- ed it.

King Alfred's Bugle.

The most interesting of all bugles is the famous "blowing stone," first used by Alfred the Great to signal his troops on the field of Ashdown. It is in the historic Vale of the White Horse, in Berkshire, England, and is a mass of sandstone so curiously pierced with holes that when blown it emits a loud, clear call. The sound travels over the green meadows, through the woods of the river Ock, echoing among the White Horse hills and down to King Alfred's camp on the southern slope and back to Wayland Smith's cave, where the smith lived, whom no one ever saw, who shod the travelers' horses left at his door.—London Specta- tor.

The White of an Egg.

The white of an egg is made up of little cells filled with albumen. By beating the white these cells are rup- tured and oxygen from the air is in- closed, which gives the white and light appearance to beaten eggs. The white of a stale egg will not inclose as much oxygen, will not be as light and as easily digested as that of the fresh egg and, of course, less valuable. The im- portance of beating the egg in cold, pure air is readily seen.

Balanced Rocks.

In Acushnet, Me., are two rocks pe- culiarly situated on a ledge and appar- ently placed there by a glacial action. The larger rock weighs probably sever- al hundred tons, and years ago, it is said, this could be tilted by pushing against it. There are evidences that some time smaller rocks were placed as wedges to keep the great rock mo- tionless.

The word "pedagogue," as applied to schoolteachers, is from a Greek word, paidagogos, compounded of pais, boy and agogos, leader; hence paidagogos, leader of boys. In ancient Greece the paidagogos was not strictly an instructor, but a domestic slave who looked after the boys of a family, took them to and from school and kept them off the streets. The boys were put in his charge at the age of six, and he probably sat with them in school. Although his position was simply that of a trusted servant, it came in time to be applied to the teacher, though always with a slurring or contemptuous significance.

Love For an Hour.

What is it that makes people so much better company at a masquerade than under any other circumstance?

In the circle of the black mask and the domino we have no name, no past, no future, no self to live up to or down to and the mood that is uppermost need never impose itself upon a later mood.

We can be spontaneous and genuine. No wonder we are good company!

For on the whole our spontaneous impulses are kindly and gay.

We are almost ready to love our fellow men for an hour if we are not thereby committing ourselves to loving them for a lifetime.

Hard on the Proofreader.

Getting typographical errors out of dictionaries is a task beside which that little Augean stable affair of Hercules was an afternoon snap.

When the Oxford edition of the Bible was published the proofs were read and reread ten times. Then a reward of $250 was offered to any one who should find a typographical blunder.

One was found in the first chapter of Genesis. Dictionary proofreading is even more difficult than Bible proofreading.

There is a tradition that a man who read proofs of the Lord's Prayer for that Oxford edition went insane out of fear lest he made a blunder in it.

A Mystery.

How is it that a manacled convict can escape unhurt by leaping from a train running at the rate of thirty miles an hour when every time the average citizen slips in alighting from a car he injures himself so severely that the railway company must pay him big damages?

consideration until the hour of doom. Another feature of Chinese justice, so far as the lash is concerned, is its strict impartiality.

Highborn offenders are flogged as relentlessly as criminals of the lower orders. The back of many a silken robed dignitary has been scored with the leather thongs of the whips wielded by sturdy Chinese officials, whose duty it has been to lay on the lash heavily, regardless of the rank of the victim, on pain of being flogged themselves.

The Chinese legal code prescribes the lash for many offenses so trivial that in Europe they would be quite outside the scope of the law. Not all of the enactments are enforced nowadays, but we may quote two of them as quaint examples. Fifty lashes were ordered to be given to any merchant or tradesman offering for sale goods not of the quality they are represented to be while self glorification is discouraged by a law that any military man who raises a monument to himself for deeds of heroism which he has never performed is to receive 100 lashes.—Pearson's Weekly.

The Gaelic A B C.

Every letter in the Gaelic alphabet is represented by a tree. The alphabet of today consists of eighteen letters—in ancient Gaelic seventeen—and now, as of old, all the letters with the exception of g, t and u, which stand for ivy, furze and heather, are called after trees.

The Gaelic A B C of today runs: Ailm, beite, coll, dur, eagh, fearn, gath, huath, loch, luis, muin, nuin, oiv, peith, ruil, suil, teine, ur, which is equivalent to saying elm, birch, hazel, oak, aspen, alder, ivy, whitethorn, lew, rowan or quicken, vine, ash, spindle tree, pine, elder, willow, furze, heath.

In the ancient Gaelic alphabet the letter h (the heath or whitethorn) does not exist. The alphabet is called the beth-luis-nuin, because b l n and not a b c are its first three letters.

The Dragon Fly.

It is hard to realize that the brilliant dragon fly, which darts through the air at such terrific speed, was once an ugly, mud colored, slow moving inhabitant of some pool or lake. These mud dragons, or dragon fly nymphs, conceal themselves in the mud at the bottom of the pond where they are born and cover up their faces with innocent looking claws, which are in reality powerful gripping organs with spines on the inside. If you put a mud dragon into your aquarium and watch it you will see those claws open and stretch forward, grip their victim and convey it to the mouth that lies concealed behind them.—Youth's Companion.

Not Satisfactory.

A young man entered the haberdashery shop and approached the lordly salesman behind the counter.

"I bought this necktie here day before yesterday," he said, "and I want to return it."

"Sure it has," replied the customer. "I wore it last night when I proposed to my best girl, and she refused me. That's why I want to return it."

Almost a Getaway.

"Where are you going?" asked the proprietor of a rooming house who was roused in the early hours of the morning just in time to catch a lodger creeping stealthily downstairs with his baggage in his hands.

"Oh—er," stammered the lodger, "I was walking in my sleep."

A BIG TAX

Monday, May the 15th, saw into effect of the new tax levied by the Ontario Government on patrons of all places of amusement. It is estimated that the tax will produce an annual revenue of $500,000. The real meaning of the tax is that the people of Ontario who live in cities and small towns alike, the movies, will have to pay the Ontario Government half a million a year in taxation in addition to the other taxation they are paying.

While there is no objection to the people against paying the amusement tax, there is a prevalent feeling that at least part of the necessity for the imposition of this tax is the failure of the government to administer an economical government. It is its failure to exact just from some of the wealthy plutocrats as the take toll from the common people. If they had been as tax these plutocrats as the street there would have been need for this amusement tax. For example, the government levies they should levy, under the Tax Act, on The Canada Company, which mines nickel, to take from this company some this year, instead of the pall which they are actually taking from the five year agreement entered into by the government in 1912 as Minister of Management which Mr. Hearns was not authorized by the Legislature to do.

Sam Clark, M.P.P., for Eastern Ontario, stated the case for the nickel tax when he said "The government taxes the poor man who works for a nickel and lets the rich man who owns the nickel companies go scot-free."

In 1906, under the Conservative administration the expenditure of the province were eight and a half million dollars; to-day under the Liberal administration, the expenditure is twenty-three million dollars.

FIGHTING THE ONE MI

One of the big surprises in the current situation is the violence of the attack made by the Conservative Government of Ontario on the provincial government for levying the special tax, which applies equally to all provinces. Mayor Church declares that the tax is illegal, unconstitutional, but claims that the Ontario government is spending the money so exclusively for war purposes, or not Mayor Church is right in contention, the important matter is that, again in the government would not to lay this heavy extra burden on the people if they had managed more economically.

The Mail and Empire (Col.) links up Mayor Church's attack with the provincial government with the provincial government between the municipalities of the province, the question of the management of the Hydro Electric Commission, in other words, the McGarry case.

Even this government or, however, recognizes the widening of the gap between the municipalities and the provincial government, which obviously endangers the very safety of the government's tenure of power.

Report adopted.

Coun. Graham informed the Council that the Seymour Power Co. asked for the return of a $50.00 check deposited with the Town Treasurer as a guarantee for the proper repaving of the streets when dug up by them. On motion the check was ordered returned.

A By-law to raise $10,000 for the purpose of building certain roads within the town of Napanee was introduced and given its first reading. The council went into committee of the whole on the second reading, when on motion of Mayor Ruttan and Coun. Graham, the Committee rose, reported progress, and begged leave to sit again.

Moved by Coun. Graham, seconded by Reeve Osborne, that the town solicitor be instructed to submit the above by-law to the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board, which will meet in Napanee on Thursday, May 18th, for an opinion, and for advice as to best method of dealing with matters. Carried.

TOWN COUNCIL.

Council Chamber,

May 15th, 1916.

Council met in regular session on Monday evening, Mayor G. F. Ruttan in the chair.

Present—Reeve Osborne and Councillors Denison, Ming, Steacy and Graham. The minutes of the last regular session were read and confirmed.

Col. Lowe, officer in command of the 146th Batt., addressed the council on matters pertaining to recruiting. Col. Lowe stated that about 150 more men were needed to fill up the ranks of the battalion, and the need was urgent as their ranks must be filled before going into camp. All the councils throughout the county were being asked to co-operate with the recruiting officers in an endeavor to enlist the required men. For the past two or three weeks recruiting has been very slow, owing, no doubt, to the fact that the eligible men are going back to the farms, and the laboring men are otherwise busily employed. He urged the council to pass a resolution, and have it appear in the local press, calling upon all the eligible young men to enlist. The 146th Batt. expects to go into camp within the next week or ten days, but as yet no definite order has gone through. This battalion is recruited entirely from the counties of Lennox and Addington and Frontenac, and it can justly, and proudly, be said that from a standpoint of efficiency, both as to the standard of men enlisted, and the excellence of organization, the 146th Batt. is second to none. About 35 men are wanted from the county of Lennox and Addington. Col. Lowe excellence of organization, the 146th Batt., is second to none. About 35 men are wanted from the county of Lennox and Addington. Col. Lowe thanked the council for the opportunity granted him to address them, and concluded his remarks by saying that this great fight was not an opportunity for a few, but was every man's fight, and unless the eligible young man came forward and voluntarily enlisted some scheme of national registration would have to be put into force, and then they would be compelled to enlist.

The following resolution was then introduced and passed by a unanimous vote:

Moved by Coun. Steacy, seconded by Coun. Graham, in view of the fact that the 146th Batt., which is recruited from the Counties of Lennox and Addington and Frontenac is approaching strength, but is still short upwards of 100 men, and in view further that it is necessary to have the Company up to strength before it goes into camp, and further that this Battalion is our home Batt. be it therefore resolved that in the opinion of the council it is urgent that every man in the municipality eligible for enlistment do immediately join the colors, in order that our Battalion may close up its ranks, and at once go into camp, and the council does hereby call upon all patriotic citizens of the town to use their best endeavors to further immediate enlistments of all eligible young men. Carried.

A communication was read from Sam D. Fowler, Assistant-Secretary of The Seymour Power and Electric Co. Limited, bringing to the attention of the Court of Revision the fact that all lands, plants, and machinery belonging to The Seymour Power and Electric Co., Limited holding in this municipality, vested in the Ontario Government as at 1st of March, 1916, by virtue of the Central Ontario Power Act, passed by the Ontario Legislature on the 20th April. He therefore requested that the charge of ownership should be made in the Assessment Roll, and that the company should be assessed for the current year for two months only.

Referred to the Finance Committee.

very collected waste paper for them, to Mr. L. M. Brooks for his trouble in making arrangements for the transport, of the material collected to the mill; and to Mrs. Templeton for kindly allowing storage for the same in her barn, at considerable inconvenience, until such time as the papers could be removed.

Some of our friends have responded very kindly to our recent appeal for clothing for the French and Belgian refugees, but, still we must have more before we can make an adequate shipment. Do not cast aside anything in good condition that can be used for above purpose, or any material that can be made up, for we have excellent cutters who will help us out, and others who will sew the goods when prepared.

At the same time, our hospital work must not be neglected, for the need in France and for the Serbians is great, as anyone can understand who reads the reports on this subject by Madam O'Gorman, and Miss Kathleen Burke, of the Scottish Women's Hospitals; which are being printed in all our papers.

Therefore, let us do all that is possible in this direction, in supplies, and in surgical dressings, for all of which there is such crying need after the terrible engagements that have taken place round Verdun, and elsewhere.

Remember our weekly work-meeting every Thursday afternoon—when we hope to see all interested in our work. These meetings should and will continue to hold interest for all who attend them. Our room is also open each Saturday afternoon.

THERE IS MONEY IN IT.

To-day the prudent farmer hardly dreams of planting seed grain without testing it. He realizes there is on deposit in the Bank of Nature a huge sum of money, much of which may be his if elementary rules are followed in seeding and cultivating.

The average dairyman with twenty cows may reasonably expect as his share of nature's hoard a yearly income of two thousand dollars if the resultant crops are marketed through suitable cows. But can the unselected, untested cow be expected to take a prominent part in that annual distribution of nature's wealth? She may be fed and cared for to the best of her owner's ability, but there seems to be a loose end if he does not turn round and test her, determine her ability to turn the vast deposits in nature's bank into a round nine thousand pounds of milk and leave a clear profit if milk fetches one-twenty per hundred.

Just guessing at seed vitality and power to grow is queer work; guessing at a cow's production and profit is risky and unnecessary. It is very risky because many a dairyman is deceived without the use of scales and test, quite unnecessary because the dairy division at Ottawa supplies, free of charge, milk record forms. Write for them, either the three day per month or the daily kind, with a herd record book. Their use give certainty. Test your cows, there is money in it.

British Subs Chase Foe Warships Back

Copenhagen, May 15.—A despatch to The Aftenbladet from Gothenburg, Sweden, says that a large German fleet, which was outside of Gothenburg, Saturday, with the object of capturing a British steamer about to sail for England, was forced to retire Sunday by the appearance of British submarines. The British steamer then sailed.

The German warships, however, the despatch adds, captured four Swedish steamers and took them to Germany.

"C" COMPANY, 80th BATTALION.

Written for the boys of "C" Company during their stay in Belleville before their departure for Overseas.

We're the girls from Napanee,
 Us for the boys of "C" Company;
 They're the boys, well you bet,
 The very best company out yet.

The girls of Belleville don't like it a bit

When we say "C" Company is just
 "It";

They say its a lot of boys just going to wreck,

Then they call them "Just a Rough Neck."

The boys were sorry when they left
 Napanee,

For here they don't sleep in factory,

To hear their all canned, would be nothing new,

It's just like a trick "A," and "B" would do.

When the boys got in Belleville, the very first day,

Every one of them was heard to say;
 Take us back to Napanee,

That is where we long to be.

They call it a prison, and well they might,

For they won't let the boys get out of sight;

And if by chance one of them should They're right after them with a stick of wood.

One night to get a girl two of the boys did try,

When the girls turned and said no,
 the boys asked, "why?"

They say because you're from "C"
 Company,

You better go back and finish up
 Napanee.

About "D" Company, we've nothing to say,

We'll leave that to Picton across the bay;

About "A" and "B", we don't much know,

But we're with "C" Company where ever they go.

Let anyone run on them, if they dare,
 We'll be right after them, into their hair;

They shan't beat them down, if we find it out,

We'll just tell them what they're about.

But never mind the Germans will run
 When they hear that "C" Company have come,

And when they hear this little song
 They'll know that to "C" Company they belong.

One, two, three who are we,
 We are the boys of "C" Company;

Are we in it, well, I should smile,
 We've been in it a hell of a while.

NEW COMFORTS FOR TORONTO- OTTAWA TRAVELLERS.

In conference with their customary progressive policy, the Canadian Northern Railway has now added
 Library-Observation Compartment cars to the superior standard sleeping car equipment already operated on their night trains between Toronto and Ot-latest, wide vestibule type, containing one drawing room and four compartments; each electrically lighted and cooled. Heating arrangements permit the regulation of the heat in the individual compartment independently of the body of the car. Other commendable features are the umbrella stand, lady's curling irons, toilet service and specially arranged lights. In the library-observation section there is a writing desk with dainty stationary, comfortable lounging chairs invite repose, and the specially adjustable lights over each shoulder of the chairs prove to be an acceptable innovation to the passenger desiring to read the daily newspapers, periodicals etc., which are at his disposal. The buffet facilities embodied in these cars completes a service which will soon earn for them the reputation they deserve as "The Aristocrats of Canada

of corn and I would recommend that every farmer with low-lying land sow about 1-3 of flint corn and 2-3 ensilage dent corn.

Last season (1915) the Local Department of Agriculture conducted an experiment to determine the best variety of ensilage corn for this county. On seven farms an acre was planted consisting of seven varieties. Careful notes were taken during the growing season, sample ears saved at harvest time. The corn ranked as follows for ensilage purposes, averaging all reports: First, Golden Glow; 2nd, Wisconsin No. 7; 3rd, Bailey; 4th, Longfellow; 5th, North Dakota; 6th, Compton's Early; 7th, White Cap Yellow Dent.

The Department of Agriculture wish to repeat this experiment for 1916 and to four (4) farmers who will agree to conduct the experiment according to directions, sufficient kiln dried seed corn will be given to plant one (1) acre. The corn must be planted in hills 42 inches apart each way. Apply for the seed to Mr. G. B. Curran, Napanee.

A notice was inserted in last week's papers stating that samples of Golden Glow corn would be given to farmers on application, enough to plant 100 hills. Some of this corn is still left and may be had on application to Mr. G. B. Curran, Napanee.

FLINT CORN EXPERIMENT.

An acre of Flint Corn will produce more feed than any other crop that can be grown in Lennox and Addington county. In the acre-profit competition conducted by the Junior Farmers who took the Agricultural Short Course the average yield of shelled corn per acre was 80 bushels and in addition the stalks made valuable feed. The average profit was over $40.00 per acre.

The present spring is late and many farmers will be unable to sow as much grain as they wished. To such I advise that they sow one to five acres of Flint Corn. The corn may be husked in the fall and fed to hogs, chickens, and ground for cattle.

What is the best variety of Flint Corn? In the Acre-Profit Competition Longfellow 8-rowed Yellow Flint Corn was used, and gave perfect satisfaction, yielding in some cases 90 to 100 bushels of shelled corn per acre. However, some farmers think that the White Flint will yield more grain, while others consider the Red Flint the best. To settle the question of which is the best Flint Corn for grain production in this county, the Department of Agriculture have decided to conduct five experiments on different farms this season.

Sufficient kiln-dried seed will be given the farmer to sow one-third of an acre to Longfellow Yellow Flint, one-third of an acre to North Dakota White Flint, and one-third of an acre to King Philip Red Flint. The corn must be planted in hills 42 inches apart each way, and must be husked separately next fall, and the yield of each variety obtained.

The seed will be given free to the first five farmers applying, who will agree to follow directions. Apply to Mr. G. B. Curran, Napanee.

ENEMY SOON HAS TO SHORTEN LINE

In the course of an article on German losses, Frank Simonds, in The New York Tribune, has the following to say:

The assertion made in Berlin that more than a million men, two-thirds of them French, are fighting for Verdun, is too palpably absurd to require discussion. The French have not 800,000 or half of 800,000, on their line at Verdun or in reserve behind. A conservative estimate of the French forces engaged and in reserve is 300,000, and the German numbers are probably about equal. Neither the French nor the Germans could munition and maintain larger forces in this sector, nor could either make use of them if they could.

When the Germans assert that they are outnumbered on the western front and have been for a long time, they are telling a truth which has never been disputed. Their force has been estimated as high as 1,800,000 and as low as 1,200,000; probably 1,500,000 is a fair figure. The French have steadily had at least 1,600,000 in line and the British have long had over 1,000,000. Probably the Germans had the advantage of numbers up to the end of the battle of Flanders in November, 1914, but since then they have been heavily outnumbered.

BETRAYS FOES CALCULATION.

But the most interesting portion of the German statement is found in the declaration that the French have now only 1,600,000 men left available for service. This is palpably untrue, but it reveals an interesting German calculation and throws much light on the present German numbers because calculation of French losses made by the Germans, like those of German losses made by French, are based upon the losses suffered by those who make the calculation.

Let us take the German figures for French numbers and apply them to the German situation. France mobilized some 6,000,000 men, but not less than 2,000,000 a good third, may be deducted for service outside the battle-front, leaving the French an available active and reserve strength of 4,000,000. On the same basis, Germany from both sides, in each case applied to the enemy.

We may conclude that both the French and the Germans have exaggerated, but to about the same degree. We may assume that the French still have at least 2,000,000 men available and the Germans around 3,500,000. One may expand either figure slightly as he chooses to estimate the ratio of German and French losses as greater, but there is no oasis for any great expansion. Both have lost at about the same rate.

ALLIES GROW STRONGER.

If Germany has only 3,500,000 men left, or 3,750,000 at the most, her actual reserve is not much above 500,000, allowing for the number needed to hold the lines. The French, however, are helped by the fact that the British are steadily increasing their army in France, and have now taken over the line practically from the sea to the Somme. Every time the British take over a portion of the line the French reserve is increased, altho, of course, the actual numbers remain the same.

France has now about 1,600,000 troops in line, accepting the German figures, but she has not less than 400,000 in reserve, if Germany has any reserves left. Probably the British will take over the sector between the Oise and the Somme before the year is over and release one more French army.

MUST SHORTEN LINES.

Suppose that the French and Germans both lose at approximately the same rate for two months more. Then the French will have no reserves if their loss is 400,000; the Germans none if their loss is much above 250,000. They will then have to shorten their lines, and this is what all those who have talked about attrition have always insisted.

Germany's present bid for peace is an interesting document, viewed alongside her estimate of French losses. There is no mistaking the fact that her estimate will give new strength to the argument of those who have believed that Germany was approaching the point where her reserves would be exhausted, and there is sound reason for believing that Germany will not be able to hold her present lines for six months more if the wastage is anything like the average for the past months of the war.

NO FOE RESERVE TO HIT VERDUN

(By Col. E. P. Repington, Military Expert of The London Times.)

London, May 14.—The German Staff boasts that their 25 divisions before Verdun have been opposed by 51 of the French. Of course, there have been 30 divisions of German fighting at Verdun, but for 25 or even 30 German divisions to attack an entrenched enemy who have double that number of divisions at his command is not an act of sanity, and we are sure that the only reason General von Falkenhayn has not piled on more troops is that he has no more to pile on.

He has called to Verdun the one and only German division in reserve at his disposal on the whole eastern front and has also probably brought up a few divisions from Siberia to try to make good. He can do no more without weakening the armies holding the rest of the line unless he has fresh formations in the interior of Germany, and it is certain that no such formations have yet been at the front.

Canadian Heroes Display G

OTTAWA, May 16.—The official report on last week's operations at the front was received by the Militia Department to-day. Canadian Eye-witness:

Day after day, night after night the Canadian front guns boom, their menacing roar swelling in gradual crescendo of bombardment, now in volume to an intermittent roar. There is little rest or security in the rearward areas. Often of weeks is undone in a moment, fortifications crumble, buildings fall as if in a cave in under the ruthless explosive shells. front, leaving the French an available active and reserve strength of 4,000,000. On the same basis, Germany mobilized about 9,000,000, and put actually under arms or in reserve for active service between 6,000,000 and 7,000,000. If the French have lost 2,400,000 out of 4,000,000, then the Germans have lost not less than 4,200,000 of 7,000,000. If the French have only 1,600,000 left, the Germans have not more than 2,800,000, assuming that both have lost at the same ratio.

GERMAN LOSSES.

As to this last point there may be some dispute. Conceivably the French loss has been slightly higher proportionately than the Germans. But the Germans have been steadily fighting, while the French have had considerable periods of tranquility while the Germans were engaged with the Russians, the Serbians and the British. We may say with absolute fairness that if the French have lost 2,400,000 out of 4,000,000 the Germans have lost not less than 4,000,000 out of 7,000,000, the figures representing permanent loss in both cases.

Now it is certain that the Germans have still more than 3,000,000 in the field and in immediate reserve, because it requires not less than this figure to man their lines, and they still have some reserves. They have thus obviously taken their own ratio of loss and somewhat exaggerated it to use as the French ratio. But have they exaggerated it by much?

SMALL GERMAN RESERVE.

Hilaire Belloc, who had laid much stress upon the attrition detail, has insisted for a long time that the German permanent loss exceeds 3,000,000 and probably passes 3,250,000. In that case, as he has maintained, the Germans have—allowing 3,000,000 for their field armies, which is too little—under 750,000 left as reserve. He has pointed out also that the German loss may reach 4,000,000, which would mean that it had been at the same ratio as the Germans now adopt for French losses.

BOTH VERGE ON EXHAUSTION.

We have, then, interesting if it conclusive data furnished by German figures. If the French losses and the German are approximately equal, and everything points to this, both countries are approaching the exhaustion of all reserves pari passu. The French assert that the Germans have reached the point already and fix the German permanent loss at around 4,000,000. The Germans assert that the French have passed the point and fix the French losses at 2,400,000. We have substantial agreement on the ratio the rest of the line unless he has fresh formations in the interior of Germany, and it is certain that no such formations have yet been at the front.

Naturally the moving spectacle of the gallantry of the French at Verdun and the much less moving spectacle of the passivity of France's allies elsewhere has caused much impatience in many quarters, and we in Britain are not exempt from this feeling. We are positively sick of seeing the initiative with the Germans, and ask what our great armies in France are about. But this impatience should be curbed.

We can only attack with success 40 strong German divisions, well entrenched and provided with formidable obstacles and armament when we have the necessary superiority to make success assured.

Meanwhile, assuming that the German figures for Verdun are correct, we hold up 40 German divisions and enable 54 French divisions to exhaust 25 German divisions.

RUSS LACK GOOD ROADS.

This suits us all except Germany very well. And meanwhile we have our own ideas of what we shall do and when we shall do it, and do not intend to allow the Germans to choose our hour for us.

Similarly, on the Russian front we must not expect too much at the present. Much of this theatre is without roads, and it would be impatience run mad to expect the great armies of Russia to move without roads.

PEACE TO COME SOON: GERMANY IS EXHAUSTED

New York, May 15.—Samuel Hill, who has been associated for twelve years with his father-in-law, James J. Hill, in railroad enterprises, has just returned from a visit to King Albert of Belgium. Mr. Hill arrived from Liverpool last night on the steamer Philadelphia.

"King Albert, whom I have known personally for twenty years, was in excellent health and confident of having his country restored to him at the end of the war," said Mr. Hill.

"Germany is beaten," Mr. Hill continued, "and the end of the war is in sight. Peace will come suddenly, as the great war started in August, 1914. There will not be another winter campaign. Germany cannot struggle against the overwhelming financial strain and economic conditions prevailing since the war."

"In 1913 Germany imported 500,000 laborers to harvest her crops, and this year she will only gather in 60 per cent. of the harvest of the year before the war."

Baron Robert Oppenheim, the London financier, who is here on business relating to war finances, said:

"The war will be over soon. I believe it will end by Christmas, as the Germans cannot afford to let it go on another year. The end will come because of the financial and food conditions in Germany. She will have to accept the conditions of the allies sooner or later. We are getting the war where we want it to be."

The enemy was driven back, and one of his working parties was consequently forced to suspend operations.

On the following night Lieut. Jack- son went out again with Corp. Buston and Scouts Brown and Johnston. Use- ful information was secured.

DEEDS OF GALLANTRY!

Deeds of gallantry in connection with recent fighting continue to come to light. Major H. L. Bodwell, Inger- soll, Ont., second in command of a Pioneer Battalion, was in the trenches opposite St. Elmoi with a working party. A corporal of another battalion in- formed him that an attack was im- pending, and having ordered the men near him to take shelter Major Bod- well followed the non-commissioned officer towards some of the craters in order to warn another squad who were at work there. While on the way the explosion of a shell severely in- jured the Corporal, blinded another man and wounded the Major in the leg, shoulder and head.

Undeterred by his injuries, Major Bodwell took a despatch from the Corporal and delivered it to the officer in command of the craters. He then returned for stretcher-bearers to attend to the two wounded men, and himself carried in one of them to the dressing station.

A BRAVE FRENCH-CANADIAN.

A French-Canadian Corporal, J. M. Lemieux, rushed across two hundred yards of open ground in the face of hostile fire to assist a comrade who had been shot by a German sniper. With great difficulty Lemieux brought in the wounded man. Another gallant rescue was effected by two French-Canadian privates, Noe Savard and Joel Boisselle. Seeing a private of their battalion fall in the open at a point two hundred yards from the enemy's line, these two men dashed out together, and regardless of heavy sniping, dragged him into safety.

CLEARING THE TRENCHES.

Sergt. Alex. Petre, Royal Highlanders of Canada, was buried by the explosion of a shell and severely shaken. Notwithstanding this, he refused to leave the trenches, and remained at his post until his battalion was re- lieved.

Private Wm. Somerville of the same unit led a small party into a newly- formed crater under intense fire, and held it until an enemy attack, had been repulsed. Pioneer Sergt. Bert- ram Brayton, Royal Montreal Regi- ment, on many critical occasions dis- played great gallantry in clearing trenches and encouraging his com- rades. As the result of persistent and energetic patrol work under Lieuts. D. Worral and C. G. Powers of this regiment the enemy had been driven from several of his advanced posts and saps.

Lance-Corp. J. E. Westerman, Royal Highlanders of Canada, was wounded while leading a party to the support of men in one of the craters. He remained with his party, took charge of the crater on arrival, and stayed in it for twenty-four hours until relieved.

A British aeroplane was shot down by hostile anti-aircraft guns and fell in "No Man's" land within 60 feet of the German lines. The enemy train- ed a machine gun on it and for eight days baffled the efforts of our men to recover the bodies of the pilot and his observer. On one occasion Lieut. Tupper, Canadian Scottish, succeeded in reaching the plane but was forced to retire without accomplishing his object owing to the heavy fire opened by the Germans.

Finally Privates H. H. Finlay, Vic- toria, and W. Gregory, Fernie, B. C., sapped out 45 feet and reached the wrecked machine. Undetected by the enemy, these men not only brought the bodies back through their sap but also secured the aeroplane's gun.

IX.—RED, THE ME- DIATOR

[Copyright, The Frank A. Munsey Co.]

A LOYSIUS WALSH, the same they call "Red," was playing the mouth organ. He exhaled the melody and inhaled the accompaniment, while Patsy Barry sat beside him on the bench and kicked the wooden partition beneath, tempo marcato.

Outside the cold was intense, and the constantly opening door so lowered the temperature of the room that the music fairly steamed from Aloysius' lips in little jets of vapor. Patsy's nose peeped, cherrylike, from the shade of his enormous cap, and his whole attitude was one of absorbed interest in the performance. He admired good music; not so the manager at Forty-fifth street, who stuck his head through an opening in the partition.

"Quit dat noise, youse two," he growled, "or I'll kick de bot'n yez out er dis."

They quit inconspicuously, for the manager was of a decisive habit with messenger boys. He had just risen from a tender conversation with "B. G." in the main office, who clicked him a vivid description of herself as tall and blond, and he sighed as he pictured her languid eye and moist red lip. If he but knew it, "B. G." was stout and forty, with a three days' growth of beard and more redolent of whisky than the manager at Forty-fifth street himself.

It was scant half past 8, and the theaters were in. A light snow fell, and a bleak wind swept Broadway clear of all traffic save the cars and one or two belated playgoers. The manager lighted a fresh stogie and prepared for a quiet evening.

Aloysius and Patsy were "doping" the horses at New Orleans with the aid of a tattered, pink newspaper. They were keen sportsmen, at least in desire, and discussed in low tones a marked reversal of form shown in the fifth race that afternoon.

"Dat ain't narten," said Aloysius. "Louis d'Or was played down to even money yesterday, and she ain't finished yet."

Patsy wagged his head gravely. "Yer can't pick 'em dese days," he said. "Dey git yer bote ways, comin' and goin'."

A bell tapped insistently, and the manager drew a ticket from one of the many drawers behind the counter. He handed it to Aloysius without even glancing at it.

"Here, you!" he said. "Chase yourself."

Aloysius buttoned up his coat and carefully drew on his torn mittens.

"Where to?" said Patsy.

good to look upon, and the dinner coat which he wore by no means detracted from his appearance.

"Hustle, now," he said, "and if you come back in less than half an hour there's more coffee downstairs."

Aloysius grinned and hurried for the elevator. On his way down he discovered that the envelope, none too securely sealed, had broken open, and in the street car he drew the letter from its covering and perused it with a frown. It ran:

Dearest—Tell me you didn't mean what you said this afternoon. The boy will wait for an answer. HUBERT.

"Dat's a hot one!" Aloysius muttered, replacing it in the envelope. The car jogged along over the joints in the rails, and Aloysius, seated for warmth over a grating of the electric heater, took his harmonica from his tunic and passed it furtively across his mouth.

The only other occupants of the car were the conductor, who stood inside the door, and an old gentleman curled up in the corner behind the financial page of a conservative evening paper. At the first strains the old gentleman glanced menacingly over the celluloid rims of his glasses, and the conductor darted up the aisle of the car.

"Hey!" he yelled. "Yer wanten cut dat out. See?"

Aloysius rose slowly.

"Who for?" he inquired, and as the conductor grabbed for him he dodged and jumped nimbly from the rear platform. Standing on the sidewalk, he carefully inserted his two index fingers in either corner of his mouth and sent a shrill defiance after the retreating car. Three times and with great solemnity he repeated the performance and then turned and entered the portals of the Benson.

"Dis is for Miss Ethel Wetmore," he said to the clerk, "an' dere's an answer."

The clerk handed the note to a bell-boy, who returned a moment later.

"She wants to see the messenger," he said.

"That's all," Holworthy said. "You may go."

Still Aloysius lingered. "What are you waiting for?" Holworthy croaked.

"She told me ter come back," Aloysius replied, "and let her know what you said."

Holworthy swallowed in an effort to control his tones and made a gesture, of dismissal.

"Go!" he managed to whisper and, sinking down on the bed, covered his face with his hands, while his shoulders heaved with great choking sobs.

Aloysius turned and tiptoed from the room. A quarter of an hour later he was again conducted to Miss Wetmore's apartments in the Benson. She raised a tearful face toward him.

"Well," she said, "what did he say?" Aloysius shook his head.

"Narten, lady." She folded her hands in her lap and gazed into vacancy.

"What did he do?" she continued, and her lips trembled piteously.

"Now, lady," said Aloysius, "don't yer go ter takin' on about it de way he did. On de level, lady, he beefed sumpin' awful."

Miss Wetmore rocked to and fro in impotent misery, and Aloysius, forgetting that he was a messenger boy, laid a comforting arm on her shoulder. Gently she took his hand in hers and pressed a dollar bill into it. Aloysius turned red and choked.

"Tanks, lady," he murmured; "but I couldn't take it."

He left the money on the table and backed out of the room.

The manager at Forty-fifth street was just finishing his stogie when Aloysius came back.

"Here, you!" he said. "Chase your self."

Aloysius buttoned up his coat and carefully drew on his torn mittens.

"Where to?" said Patsy.

"Hotel Altrincham," Aloysius replied and ministered to a cold in his head with his left hand mitten.

"Leave me have demout' organ while ye're gone?" said Patsy as Aloysius made for the door.

"Aw, what fer?" Aloysius rejoined derisively.

"All right, yer miz," said the disgruntled Patsy.

The manager again inserted his head through the partition.

"Shake it up there, Four-ninety-two!" he said.

Aloysius opened the door and passed out with a blast of insulting discords on the harmonica.

"Holy crapes!" he muttered to himself as the wind struck him. "Ain't it cold?"

And he broke into a trot, with his head bent to the swirling snow.

II.

A few minutes later he entered the revolving door of the Altrincham and saluted the clerk with the monosyllable "Call."

"Front," said the clerk, "take this kid up to 89."

After a lively scuffle with the bellboy in the elevator Aloysius alighted at the eighth floor and knocked on the door numbered 89.

A tall young man answered his summons.

"Come in," he said to Aloysius. "Cold, isn't it?"

Aloysius sniffed by way of answer and sat down on the edge of the bed. He made careful survey of the room while the tall young man wrote steadily at a desk in the corner. On the dressing table were two panel photographs, and scattered about the walls were four more, all of the same person. Aloysius stared at them with the eye of a connoisseur, for messenger boys in the vicinity of Forty-fifth street are by association and environment excellent judges of feminine beauty.

The tall young man rose from his desk and went to the telephone.

"Send me a cup of hot coffee," he said to the clerk, and he returned to his writing. Soon there came a knock at the door, and a waiter appeared bearing a silver pot of coffee on a linen covered tray. He deposited it, with sugar, cream and a cup and saucer, on the dressing table.

"Drink this," said the tall young man. "You'll feel better when you go out."

Aloysius expressed his enjoyment in long gurgling inhalations until there was no more coffee left. Evidently the tall young man found letter writing a difficult task, for he began four epistles, only to tear them up. At the fifth attempt he concluded a short note and handed it to Aloysius.

"Take this letter to the Benson," he said, "and wait for an answer. If the lady says there isn't any come back and let me know. Here's 10 cents for car fare and a quarter for yourself."

Aloysius pocketed the quarter.

"Thanks, Jack," he said. "Yer all right."

The tall young man sighed heavily. He had large melancholy eyes and features so delicately molded as to appear rather weak. Altogether he was the clerk handed the note to a bellboy, who returned a moment later.

"She wants to see the messenger," he said.

III.

Aloysius was ushered into a room on the third floor in which a lady was sitting, a lady of such compelling charm that Aloysius removed his hat and gasped.

"Are you the boy that Mr. Holworthy sent?" she asked.

"A tall guy wid a dress suit?" Aloysius queried.

The lady nodded.

"Yes'm," he said.

Slowly she removed from the third finger of her left hand a solitaire diamond ring that sparkled brilliantly in the subdued lighting of the room. But Aloysius had no eyes for the gem. He gazed open mouthed at two round drops that rolled gently down the lady's cheeks.

"Now," he commenced huskily—"now, lady—don't yer, now."

He recognized in her the original of the six photographs in the room at the Altrincham, though the beauty of her features was many times enhanced by the magnificent coloring of her oval face and the gilded wealth of her hair.

She wrapped the ring in Holworthy's note and banded it to Aloysius.

"Take this to Mr. Holworthy," she said, "and let me know what he says."

She fumbled in her pocketbook and produced a quarter.

"Take this," she continued. "Hurry back."

"Thanks, lady," said Aloysius, placing the package in the lining of his hat. He stood in the door hesitatingly.

"Well, why don't you go?" said Miss Wetmore.

"Now, lady," Aloysius stammered, "don't yer go ter beefin' no more." He blushed at his own temerity and ran wildly down the stairs.

The tall young man was pacing nervously up and down his room as Aloysius entered.

"Well?" he blurted out.

"She gimme dis ter hand ter yer," said Aloysius, taking the ring from the lining of his cap.

Holworthy seized it with shaking fingers, and his face turned a ghastly white. Aloysius stood waiting in the door.

He left the money on the table and backed out of the room.

The manager at Forty-fifth street was just finishing his stogie when Aloysius came back.

"Well," he grunted, "where've you been loafing?"

Aloysius was in no mood for correction.

"Say," he piped, "me mudder's sick, an' I'm goin' home. See?"

"You are, hey?" the manager replied. "You stay right here till 7 o'clock."

For answer Aloysius flung down his oilcloth covered book and walked out of the office, banging the door behind him. Without hesitation, he made straight for the Altrincham.

"Say," he said to the clerk, "I've got an answer for Mr. Holworthy in 89."

The clerk looked at the pigeonholes behind him.

"Gone out," he replied.

"Where did he go?" Aloysius persisted.

"You might try the Criterion club," said the clerk.

By this time the light snow had grown into a driving blizzard, and Aloysius shivered as he faced the stinging particles. He turned into Fifth avenue, his head bent to the storm, just as a hansom dashed around the corner. The driver gave a mighty pull on his reins and swore horribly as Aloysius disappeared beneath the wheels. Young Holworthy jumped from the cab and carried Aloysius in his arms to the sidewalk.

"By George!" he exclaimed. "It's the messenger boy!"

When the ambulance arrived the surgeon shook his head dolefully.

"Must get him to the operating table immediately," he called to Holworthy from the back of the wagon as it clanged rapidly away.

Aloysius awoke four hours later with the fumes of the ether lingering in his nostrils. He turned his head painfully toward the white capped nurse at his side.

"Am I goin' to croak?" he whispered. The nurse patted his pillow cheerfully.

"You're all right!" she said.

"Say," he muttered again, "kin I send fer me friends?"

The nurse nodded, and placed a linen screen around him. She bent her head while he whispered two names and addresses.

It seemed like an age, but in reality it was barely half an hour before they arrived. Holworthy was the first to come. He leaned over Aloysius and pressed his hand in silent sympathy. Aloysius smiled gratefully.

"Say, Jack," he murmured, "have yer got dat ring?"

Holworthy took it from his pocket and laid it on the bed. Then Miss Wetmore entered. She stood on the opposite side of the bed and a faint flush mounted to Aloysius' cheeks as he saw her.

He closed his hand over the ring.

"Put it on, lady," he muttered.

With drooping eyes she placed the ring on the third finger of her left hand. Aloysius turned to Holworthy.

"Git over on de udder side," he whispered, and in a moment the two lovers were clasped in each other's arms.

Aloysius beamed and half rose in his bed.

"Kiss her, Jack!" he gasped, and fell back on his pillow.

BIBLE LANGUAGE.

A Revelation of Perfection and Terse- ness in Speech.

A correspondent called attention the other day to the language of the Bible in describing a windstorm, as an ex- ample of concise speech, as follows: "And the winds came from the four corners of the earth and fell upon the house, and it was not." He mentioned it, as an evidence of the simplicity and directness of Bible language. And it is well to call attention to the words and sentences of this grand old book from time to time, for in all literature there is none other more beautiful of diction, more direct or even more poetical than these ancient writings found in the Bible.

Take the opening sentence of the Bible as an illustration, "In the be- ginning God created the heavens and the earth." That is the whole story told in ten words. You cannot go far- ther back in time—"In the beginning"—that is all there is to be said upon the subject. A modern writer would probably consume a dozen pages try- ing to tell when the creation took place and then fail. But in this won- derful old book we have it stated so any one can understand it, and in the only way it could be properly stated—"In the beginning."

But one need not pick out isolated sentences or chapters. The whole book is a revelation of perfection in speech. The writings of Paul, for instance, can be taken as examples of perfect dic- tion. The description of the shipwreck when he was making his way to Rome will stand for all time as the most thrilling narrative of a storm at sea. His appeals to the members of the various congregations with whom he corresponded may be accepted as the best writings we have upon teach- ings of the Nazarene. The poems or psalms of David, written hundreds of years prior to the time the New Testa- ment was written, are still the choicest bits of sentiment and imagination that can be found, inspiring in their faith and beauty and enchanting in their eloquence.

Sumptuary Laws.

Sumptuary laws are laws, now gen- erally obsolete, enacted in the sup- posed interest of public morals to re- strain extravagance in private expend- iture, especially in matters of food, dress and amusements. They abounded in ancient Greece and Rome and found great favor in the legislation of England from the time of Edward II. (1307-27) to that of the reformation (1517). They existed in France as early as the time of Charlemagne (768-814) and continued to be enacted as late as the seventeenth century, but in neither country do they appear to have been enforced to any great extent. Sum- ptuary laws were repealed in England in 1856.

When he was interestedly questioning his neighbor he became almost satanic looking, and his glance grew so keenly inquisitive as to give the appearance of a 'cast' in his eyes.

"Carefully curled hair crowned his forehead, and his bushy eyebrows, beard and mustache gave a curious ex- pression to his face, which was rather pale, except in the evening, when he slightly 'touched up,' as the dandies of his day were in the habit of doing. The Idea of the Balloon.

The first practical idea of the bal- loon originated in the latter half of the eighteenth century, when the Mont- gollier brothers, noticing how smoke rose upward into the air, conceived the idea of filling a bag with smoke. The development of this idea resulted in the construction of the first hot air bal- loon in June, 1783. This consisted of a spherical cloth bag about thirty-five feet in diameter and inflated over a fire fed with bundles of chopped straw. The next step was the use of hydrogen gas, and the balloon was practically invented as used today. The use of this gas was the idea of M. Charles, a professor of natural philosophy at Paris.

"I can see him now standing on the hearth rug awaiting the announcement of dinner dressed 'up to the eyes' and listening with bent, attentive head to his guests. It was typical of Lord Lytton that he listened to the most in- significant of his guests with all the deference that he would have shown to the greatest. Replacing his hookah (for he smoked opium), he would be silent for a considerable time, watch- ing us out of his odd eyes, and when he spoke it was in a soft voice, which he never raised above a low tone. He told many stories of 'Disra-el-i,' whose name he pronounced with a slow de- liberation."

A Peculiarity of Carrots.

Although carrots are among the most commonly cooked vegetables in various forms—stewed, boiled, purée, soups and introduced into ragouts, braises and mirepoix—yet they are among the least digestible of vegeta- bles; but, strange to say, notwith- standing their indigestibility, so far as regards form and substance, they are not known to cause any digestive derangement.

The great affection which cooks and their masters have for carrots can only be explained by their color, which makes an impression on the eye, and their flavor and sweetness, which speak to the palate.

An Example of Turkish.

Everybody who has tackled German knows the strain of waiting for the verb at the end of the sentence which will explain what it is all about. Turk- ish goes several worse than that, giv- ing the words in almost exactly re- verse order to our own. Sir Charles Elliot cites as a typical Turkish sen- tence, "Capital and Varna between running Lloyd of company of Vulcan steamer on Stamboul to coming are we." Read that backward and its meaning becomes clear. Obviously such a language should avoid long sen- tences. Popular Turkish does, but Turkish writers indulge in mighty mazes that should be quite congenial to German professors.—London Chron- icle.

DYNAMITE ON THE FARM

Has Been Found Beneficial in Many Ways.

During the last few years it has been found beneficial to the farmer in many ways, with Neale in The Farm Progress may be used for breaking hardpan in a field, to make setting trees, to blow out stumps, blasting rock, and ditching.

When soils are underlaid with hardpan or inclined to be hard, it has been found beneficial to break up the hard soil with dynamite. It simply loosens the soil to a greater depth than the plowing. It simply loosens the soil to a greater depth than the run and admits the air and deep into the soil, thus making it possible for the roots of trees to penetrate to a greater depth.

The dynamiting of land is done by putting down holes with a auger or a sharp rod of iron.

PREPARING A DYNAMITE HOLE.

depth of two feet, and then the dynamite is exploded in each hole. A small charge of dynamite is inserted in the hole, and the fuse and cap placed in the hole. The dirt is tamped down, and the fuse is lighted, and the dynamite is exploded. The manufacture of dynamite is a science, and the dynamite makers are prepared to furnish information to farmers about dynamite, and the degrees of strength of dynamite for this purpose have been determined.

Late experiments are proving that dynamite is a very effective means of breaking up hardpan.

Farm and Garden

SOWING OATS.

They Should Be Planted With a Drill for Good Results.

The promise of an early spring will attract the attention of farmers to the grain-sowing season. The first crop considered by the majority is oats, and the buying of seed or preparing of the home-grown grain for sowing should be looked after as earlier in ground too cold and wet for the seed to germinate.

In a good seed bed the best rate of seeding in the corn belt is about two and a half bushels to the acre. If the seed is sown broadcast, more is necessary. More seed is required in a poor seed bed than in a good one, as fewer seeds are likely to grow. A lower rate of seeding may be used for small-kerneled varieties than for large-kerneled ones for there are many more of the former in a bushel.

Allow the winter protection provided the plants last fall to remain upon the plants for some time to come. It is during the alternate freezing and thawing weather of late winter and early spring that the protection is most needed.

A Gate Roller.

Instead of dragging the gate open, take a wagon box strap and nail or bolt it to the bottom slat of the gate, says E. J. Chambers in The Farm Progress. Saw a wooden roller, a sort of a wooden wheel, from an eight inch log and bore a hole in the oats, and the buying of seed or preparing of the home-grown grain for seeding should be looked after at once.

The best way to sow oats is with the grain drill. Drilling gives a more even stand than broadcast seeding, for all the seed is covered to about the same depth. In sowing broadcast some of the seed may not be covered at all and some may be covered too deeply. Germination is better from drilled seed and the growth is more uniform throughout the season. In numerous tests at the experiment stations drilled oats have outyielded oats sown broadcast by several bushels to the acre. Better stands of grass and clover can also be obtained in drilled than in broadcast oats.

The best depth to sow oats varies with the soil and the season. In any case they should be covered with half an inch to an inch of moist soil. They should be sown deeper in sandy soils than in loams or clays. Deeper seeding is also necessary when the ground is dry than when it is moist. On the average the best depth is from one to one and a half inches.

Oats should be sown as early in the spring as it is possible to make a good seed bed. The exact date of sowing varies with the season and with the locality. This does not mean that the preparation of the land should be neglected in order to sow early. Better yields will be produced from seed sown in a good seed bed than from that sown a few days tection is most needed.

To Drive Staple Straight.

In the erection of wire fence it is generally necessary to drive a large number of staples, and for the security of the fence it is desirable that the staples should be driven straight and accurately. Owing to the irregularities of the wooden posts and the strain of the fence wire, which is under a heavy tension when being erected, it is not always an easy matter to put the staples just where they are wanted to be of the most service.

The tool shown in the accompanying cut is designed to accomplish this. With its aid a great many more staples may be driven in a given time, and they are driven in a much superior manner. Besides being a convenience to fence erectors, there are other mechanics who will find use for this tool, such as electricians, boxmakers, coopers, and the like.—Farm Progress.

Drain Soil for Alfalfa.

In the humid sections of the country it is especially important to provide a well drained soil for alfalfa. In the irrigated districts the problem of drainage to prevent or reduce the accumulation of alkali is often serious. In the regions of heavy rainfall natural drainage must be provided. It has been found that alfalfa requires much more complete drainage of the soil than do other field crops. Where the underdrains are unable to carry off the rainfall rapidly enough for prompt drainage it is sometimes the practice to back furrows, leaving the dead furrows at intervals of a rod or less. This permits the water to run off quickly in the event of heavy rains.

Sunflower Seed as Feed.

Sunflower seed because of its cost and high fiber content, is not so desirable a poultry feed as is generally supposed. In the first place it is too expensive, and then, too, it contains a large amount of crude fiber. It is a good feed, however, for the molting period. The oil seems to aid in giving gloss to the feathers. Protein, one constituent of which is glycol, is essential to feather growth, and the sunflower is rich in protein.

sort of a wooden wheel, from an eight inch log and bore a hole in the centre. Place this on the strap and fasten it there with a washer and nut. Your gate will quit sagging, and you can roll it open or shut. There is no patent on this, and I want everybody to have the benefit of using it.

Nest Boxes.

Few hen houses are equipped with enough nest boxes. Not fewer than one nest to every four hens should be used; if the pullets cannot find an empty nest when they wish to lay, the eggs will be left on the floor, where they are easily broken, and may establish the vice of egg-eating. Hens like a darkened nest; not only should the nests be dark, but they should be abundantly roomy — about 8 x 10 inches, and 6 to 8 inches high, and easily taken out and cleaned. They should be easily accessible, not only for the hens, but for the owner as well. If a top is used, it should be sloping, to prevent the hens roosting over the nests. A good arrangement of nests is to place them under the droppings boards, with entrance facing the wall; slanting roof hinged to open at the back of the nests in gathering the eggs. Do not use strong-smelling disinfectants or mite killers about the nest boxes, the eggs will take up the odor and be unfit for use. Depend on keeping the nests clean with hot suds, whitewash or non-smelling cleansers. Use no material which will not soil the eggs and is fairly fine. Fine hay or straw is good. If the nests get wet, change straw immediately.

Take Care of the Breed Sow.

Probably 75 per cent. of the losses of young pigs are due to ignorance or neglect on the part of the owner in selecting, feeding, and caring for the breed sow and not more than 25 per cent. to bad weather conditions, inexperienced sows, and other unavoidable things.

A Bit of Translation.

The difficulty of avoiding bad blunders when one is translating from English into such a language as that of the Micmac Indians of Nova Scotia must be very great, says a writer in the London News. We hear from the Bible society of a curious case. In the first edition of St. Matthew in Micmac the translator found when he came to revise it that in chapter xxiv, 7, instead of "nation shall rise against nation" he had written, "A pair of snowshoes shall rise up against a pair of snowshoes." And yet there was only one single letter misprinted—naoootakumiksijik (a nation) having been displaced by naootakumiksijik (a snowshoe).

WOMAN SUFFERAGE.

Its War Time Aspect.

London, Eng. The women of England are doing their duty. They are taking care of the wounded, or if they cannot assist in work of that kind they are adding their savings to promote the good work. They are knitting and sewing for the soldiers at the front. The suffragists have given so little trouble to the government that it will undoubtedly soften the hearts of those in Parliament, since the "militants" have turned all their energies to aid the fighting men of England, and so sufferage may soon come after this terrible war is over.

"Thousands of women in Canada have overcome their sufferings, and have been cured of woman's ills by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This temperance medicine, though started nearly half a century ago, sells most widely to-day, because it is made without alcohol or narcotics. It can now be had in tablet form as well as liquid, and every woman who suffers from backache, headache, nervousness, should take this "Prescription" of Dr. Pierce. It is prepared from nature's roots and herbs and does not contain a particle of alcohol or any narcotic. It's not a secret prescription for its ingredients are printed on wrapper.

Many a woman is nervous and irritable, feels dragged down and worn out for no reason that she can think of. In ninety-nine per cent. of these cases it is the womanly organism that requires attention; the weak back, dizzy spells and black circles about the eyes, are only symptoms. Go to the source of trouble. When that is corrected the other symptoms disappear.

St. Thomas, Ont.—"I wish to say for the benefit of other women who suffer that I recommend Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription as a great help. I have personally recommended the same to many who in turn have been helped a great deal by its use."—Mrs. F. J. BOWDEN, 19 Oliver St., St. Thomas, Ont.

FOR SPRING WEDDINGS.

One Attractive Way to Give the Bride a Shower.

With spring already upon us, the thought of spring weddings is now in the air. This is the ripe season for linen showers and other showers of household necessities given to the bride by all her friends. The girl who is to be married in April will be the recipient of many an entertainment before she is safely wedded, but she will enjoy nothing more than a shower if her friends have any novel ideas on the subject.

The chief point in a shower must always be its surprise; otherwise it would not be a shower. If you are thinking of giving such an affair for some friend who is soon to be married be sure that every detail is kept a secret from her. That is half the fun.

A novel idea for a linen shower can be executed in the following way: Invite the bride to be to spend an evening at your home with a few old friends. See that she arrives the first and is comfortably seated and chatting when the other guests begin to arrive. Of course the latter are in the secret or else there would be no shower.

Each guest must come in carrying an umbrella. The bride may not notice the first one, but she will certainly remark before long that every one who enters carries an umbrella. She will probably ask before the last one arrives if it is raining, in which case the guest questioned should answer, "No, but it looks like a shower."

When all the guests have arrived each one must gain possession of her own umbrella in case it has been laid aside on her entrance. At a given signal, which should be some such remark from the hostess as "Did you say it looked like a shower?" the guests should all open their umbrellas with the answer, "It certainly does."

From the steel ribs of each umbrella should be suspended by a string the parcel holding the piece of linen which the guest intends to give the bride. Any big bundles, like a tablecloth, will make the umbrella a bit bulky when closed, but in such case the guest will have to smuggle her umbrella in unnoticed. But most linen pieces can be done up in such small parcels that they can easily be concealed in a closed umbrella.

At the signal to open the parcels will all hang down by their strings. The guests must then hold their umbrellas over the bride-to-be's head. The hostess provides her with scissors to cut down her various bundles, and the point of the shower is made apparent.

"Willie's Party."

"You can have a party," Willie's mother said, "but don't disgrace the family by doing something that you ought not to do. Remember, you will have to wait at table and in every way play the part of host, and it would be a terrible thing if you should set a bad example." Nine boys came to Willie's party, and they sat four on each side of the table and one at one end and Willie at the other.

They were all nice little boys, who had good manners, and ate with their mouths closed, and never used their knives except to cut with, and held them in the proper way. They used their forks to eat with for meat course, vegetables, and also for the dessert, for Willie's mother let him have a real dinner, and she and his big sister waited at table. It was quite a success, and mother said that she thought it was just as necessary for boys to play host once in awhile as for girls to play hostess, and she was glad Willie had a dinner party, which, by the way, was at 1 o'clock instead of in the evening, as grown-ups' dinners are.

Shipwrecked Man and the Sea.

A shipwrecked man having been cast upon a certain shore, slept after his buffetings with the deep. After awhile waking up, when he looked upon the sea, he loaded it with reproaches that, enticing men with the calmness of its looks, when it had induced them to plow its waters, it grew rough and destroyed them utterly. The sea, assuming the form of a woman, replied to him: "Blame not me, my good sir, but the winds, for I am by my own nature as calm and firm even as this earth, but the winds falling on me on a sudden, create these waves and lash me into fury."

Washing Woolen Goods.

To wash woolen goods successfully the water should be soft and warm, not hot, and of uniform temperature throughout the operation. Never put soap directly on the fabric, and use only the milder kinds. Make a nice suds before putting the garment in the water. Scrub gently and wring through loosely set wringers. Once washed, the goods should be immediately hung up to dry and never allowed to lie about wet. It is best to dry woollens out of doors if the air is dry and the temperature above freezing.

Cream of Carrot Soup.

Wash the carrots and scrape them, cut in thin slices until you have two cupfuls, using only the red part. Put in a stewpan with a tablespoonful of butter, one tablespoonful of sugar, and salt to taste. Cover with water and cook until tender; then rub through a sieve. A dainty and acceptable gift to tuck into the bride's traveling bag as a little surprise to her when her destination is reached is a boudoir set of cap and ribbon slippers. A Hygiene Note.

When a child begins with a cold isolate it from the other children in the house and do not let it attend school until it is better. Not only is a cold contagious in itself, but in children a cold is often the beginning of a contagious disease, and it is not fair to other children to let them come in contact with a cold until it is proved to be nothing serious.

There is no better gargle or nose douche for a beginning inflammation than salt and water. Of course the solution must be weaker for the nose. Nose douches should be taken only on a doctor's advice, as the membrane of the nose is very delicate and the treatment must necessarily vary with the child. Never let the child go out of doors after spraying nose and throat.

Attractive Suits.

Every woman who can possibly afford it will invest in one of the attractive suits of pongee, poplin or silk homespun. They are a delightful combination of style and utility and, though rather high priced, are well worth the cost. They are to be had in white, cream and oyster white, tau, brown and biscuit Dutch, navy and gray blue, besides different tones of green and gray.

Now we have little wagons to use in the library. These book wagons do not take up much space in the library.

Watch for our opening sale at the Sproule Store. Beverley McDonald Co.

Hurrah! Hurrah! Hurrah!

For Picton's big Victoria Day celebration. There will be a big military tournament of field sports in which the soldiers of the 155th stationed at Picton will compete. There will be a 100 yard dash; 220 yard dash; 440 yard dash; 100 yard boot race and a tug-of-war between the 5th and 6th platoons of "B" Company, also half-mile foot race, and special prize given by the officers of the company to the winner of most prizes. The horse races will be first class; there will be a good baseball game, and good music will make for one of the most enjoyable days ever spent in Picton.

The Sproule Store.

The Beverley McDonald Co., of Picton, have purchased the stock of G. P. Sproule & Co., and will re-open the store next week with a fully assorted stock of family groceries. The Beverley McDonald Co., come to Napanee from Picton, where they have been in the grocery business for years, and will continue both the Picton and Napanee stores. In Picton the Beverley McDonald Co., have the reputation of having the finest grocery in that town and have always carried the choicest stock, their motto being "not how cheap but how good." Under the management of this progressive firm the store here will be well stocked and their goods may be safely guaranteed as represented. The meat market in connection with the store will also be re-opened with the best procurable supply of meats. The Beverley McDonald Co., will be a welcome addition to Napanee business houses.

DIED IN MINNEAPOLIS.

The friends and acquaintances of Bridget McConnell, second daughter of the late Edward McConnell, of Yarker, and wife of Thos. O'Connor, Cataragui, will be surprised to hear of her sudden demise which occurred in Minneapolis, Minn., on Friday, May 4th. Three weeks ago the deceased left for Minneapolis to be present at the bedside of her sister, Mrs. McGrath, who was seriously ill. She was apparently in good health until a week before she died, when she contracted pleuropneumonia and was removed to St. Mary's hospital, where everything possible was done to save her life. On Thursday all hopes were held out for her recovery, but her heart was too weak to stand the strain and her sufferings ceased the next morning. On Sunday the remains were brought to Cataragui, and from there the funeral was held on Tuesday morning to Odessa where solemn requiem mass was sung by Rev. Father Staley and her remains were placed beside those of her brother. She is survived by her husband, four brothers, James and Alexander, of Yarker, John, of Toronto, and Edward, of Harrowsmith, who is now seriously ill, also two sisters, Mrs. P. J. McGrath, of Minneapolis, Minn., and Mrs. John McGrath, of Tweed, Ont.

MILLING—At Richmond, on Monday, May 15th, Prescilla Helena Milling, born February 18th, 1857, died
May 15th, 1916.

SAMUEL HAMBLEY

One of the oldest and a highly respected citizen of Napanee passed away on April 18th, in the person of Mr.
Samuel Hambley, Sr. The late Mr.
Hambley was born in Cornwall, England, June 18th, 1829. He moved with his parents to Canada when a boy of only eleven, and settled in North Fredericksburgh, on the farm now owned by Ezra Hambley. He lived in that community for 55 years, when he moved to Napanee.

When quite a young man, Mr.
Hambley married Margaret Dryden, and to them were born nine children.
One died in infancy, but the other eight reached the years of manhood and womanhood. Four, however, predeceased their father, two sons, George and James, and two daughters, Emma, wife of Mr. Samuel Walmsley, and Addie, wife of Mr. Andrew Fretz, both of South Fredericksburg. But four children survive, John, the eldest,
of Hambley & Ming, Napanee; Melissa, wife of Nelson Unger, of Ernestown;
Mary, Mrs. Creighton, South Fredericksburg; and Carrie, wife of Wilfred Dupree, of Richmond.

Mr. Hambley was converted to God about 30 years ago, and united with Greta Methodist church. On his removal to Napanee he transferred his member-ship to Grace church, of which church he was a member at the time of his death. Being of a retiring disposition, he never sought publicity either in church or state. He was very fond of home life, indulgent to his children, and consistent in his living.
His remains were laid to rest in the family plot in the eastern cemetery, awaiting the resurrection morn.
